

Working with Parents and Children/Youth to Break the Intergenerational Cycle of Trauma and Addiction

Wednesday, August 7th, 2019

9:00 a.m.— 4:00 p.m. (8:30 a.m. Registration)

About this training

“The apple doesn’t fall far from the tree.” Unfortunately, there are unhealthy characteristics that can be passed from one generation to the next. For families across the nation, that struggle of addiction is a difficult cycle to break. Even just one person can impact a future generation’s substance abuse risk down the road. Please join Laurie Markoff, Ph.D. as she provides the tools to break the cycle.

Objectives—At the end of the training Participants will be able to:

- Describe the impact of trauma on adults, children, youth, attachment and parenting
- List protective factors that can be enhanced in children, youth and families to promote resilience
- Describe the goals and approaches for interventions for individual parents
- Describe the goals and approaches for interventions for children and youth
- Describe the goals and interventions for parent-child dyads
- Describe trauma informed parenting interventions
